Record Crowd Sees Victory And Dedications At H-SC

Approximately 4,000 Tiger fans were on the Hampden-Sydney campus Saturday for the college's annual Homecoming festivities which featured the dedications of the P. Tulane Atkinson Administration Building, the Willoughby Shelton Hundley Athletic Stadium, and a glorious 41 to 25 Tiger victory over the Lions of Frederick College.

At the meeting of the Alumni Association Saturday morning, the following officers were elected for 1964-65: President, C. Hobson Goodlin, of Richmond; vice president, James Trinkle, of Roanoke; and secretary, D. C. "Gus" Mayes, of Dinwiddie. Elected to membership on the Alumni Association's executive committee W. C. Thomas, of Chatham; John B. James, of Richmond; Joe E. Bedinger, of Charleston, W. Va.; and A. A. Adkins, III, of Richmond.

Taking awards during the morning meeting of the Association were the Richmond Alumni Chapter and the class of 1933.

Building Dedicated

The main event of the alumni meeting was the dedication of Paul Tulane Atkinson Administration Building, renamed to honor the memory of the late "Mr. P. T.", who served the college for 38 years.

In delivering the dedication address, Robert W. Lawson, Jr., a member of the college's Board of Trustees, said:

"Tradition holds that upon an occasion such as this one should be quite somber and prosaic in the sentiments expressed. Although such sentiments are quite genuine, they sometimes become so time worn and familiar that perhaps their meaning is lost. Therefore, because of my love for and admiration of 'P. T.', I shall deviate from time honored tradition and address myself briefly to what I regard as the fountain head of his all too brief useful life: the four lodestars as it were, on which the course of his worthwhile career was fixed — his church, his family, his college, and his fellow man.

"The Psalmist of old has said 'When I consider Thy Heavens, even the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars which Thou has ordained: What is man that Thou art mindful of him? (Psalm 8:4-5)

"Upon such foundation was the life of P. Tulane Atkinson built.

"His length of service as an officer and worker in the church was a blessing but not his principal claim to greatness. Those characteristics of true greatness as were personified by him in such full measure — an infectious personality, unimpeachable integrity, Christian character and sparkling wit and intellect, have left their mark upon succeeding generations of those who have known and loved him.

"He was a friend to every fraternity on the campus and no matter how vigorous the competition between fraternities, the president of any other fraternity just as quickly sought Mr. Atkinson and his advice as did the president of Iota Chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha . . ."

His eminent stature as college administrator, churchman and community leader indicates the vigor of his personality and the warmth of his friendship. His love and sympathy for, and understanding of, people, particularly the ones of college age, made him most welcome company upon any occasion.

"As a raconteur he had no superior. It is sad indeed that his stories, his limitless recollection of College incidents and events of earlier years, were never reduced to writing. Much of the College's lore went with Mr. Atkinson . . .

"And how he loved this College and its students! To see him surrounded by a group of students and perhaps others, was a sight to behold! And to hear his infectious and hearty laugh was a bracing tonic. He had the rewards of living with youth but such is only truly rewarding to those, like P. T., whose hearts are big and warm. He was ever ready with a word of advice. It was his privilege to share the problems and setbacks of his friends and his delight to hear of their triumphs and successes. What greater fortune and reward could any man have!

"Of P. Tulane Atkinson and his lamented death one can truly say in the words of Kahlil Gibran, the Eastern Prophet:

'Only when you drink from the river of silence shall you indeed sing. And when you have reached the mountain top, then you shall begin to climb, and when the earth shall claim your limbs, then shall you truly dance.'

"Horace in the first Ode in his Book I . . . enumerated the different kinds of people in the world, and the one placed at the head of the list:

'To some it is their benefits to have covered their chariot with olympic dust, to have

Airman To Train As Weather Specialist

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — Airman David C. Reid, Jr., son of Mrs. David C. Reid, Sr., of Rt. 1, Appomattox, Va., is undergoing the first phase of his Air Force basic military training at Lackland AFB, Tex.

Airman Reid has been selected for technical training as a weather specialist at the Air Training Command (ATC) school at Chanute AFB, Ill. His new unit is part of the vast ATC system which trains airmen and officers in the diverse skills required by the nation's aerospace force.

The airman is a 1964 graduate of Appomattox High School.

A SCHOOL PRAYER amendment was called for Saturday by Sen. Barry Goldwater in a speech in the Mormon Tabernacle at Salt Lake City, Utah. The GOP candidate said this was not time to "ban God" from the classroom and called on Congress to put the issue to the test of a constitutional amendment. Goldwater spoke of the "moral crisis" of our times and hit at President Johnson for offering "you a shopping list."

PRESIDENT SUKARNO of Indonesia and a group of hardline leaders are pressing the Cairo conference of nonaligned nations to approve actual military assistance for guerrilla warfare in places such as Malaysia, Aden and Oman. These are countries which the conference believes are controlled or dominated by imperialists, especially the British and Portuguese. Moderates led by President Tito of Yugoslavia and Prime Minister Shastri of India want only a general expression of "political, moral and material support."

Dear Brother Vaughan,

The timely articles of Brother Tom Waddill I do appreciate. They are a good continuation of the "Pastor's Word". We still enjoy reading the "news".

We noted with interest the call and acceptance of Liberty by Rev. Alderman. Glad to see the progress under his leadership.

We miss Appomattox, but are beginning to enjoy the summer here in Florida's fall. After the hurricanes, we are having some beautiful weather.

Our two children, Phil and Eveann are adjusted and happy in their work. Phil is playing offensive end and defensive tackle on the Hastings High Varsity, the "Spudders". Eveann, has just been chosen as one of the cheer leaders of St. Johns' River College. She is doing well in her college work. Perhaps some of the youngsters of Appomattox would enjoy hearing about this. Give our best wishes to the staff, and all.

Sincerely,
O. D. Moore

Pastor Says

I wonder how many of us have embarked on a new plan of Bible reading because of my last several columns. Or are we too busy to be bothered with such an undertaking? Why should we read the Bible anyway? It's two thousand years old and after all things are different now. Why not spend my time on something more recent, more up-to-date?

To these questions the Christian Church answers, because the Bible is, in a broad sense God's Word for today. For more than twenty centuries men have heard God's voice as they read the Bible. The Bible may have been written by men of a different culture two millenniums ago but it is the witness and testimony of flesh and blood human beings to their experiences with God. In the words of Edward P. Blair, "In the Bible we come face to face with God—and it is enough."

In no modern book can we find such complete information about God and his dealings with men. Indeed the books being written today use the Bible as their source book. Men today are questioning the Bible. They have a right to ask the church to substantiate its claims about the Bible. And when the church claims for the Bible what the Bible claims for itself it has no trouble substantiating these claims. To be sure, it cannot outprove, according to scientific or philosophical methods, the truth of the Bible. We as Christians begin from a different starting point. We begin from the standpoint of faith.

As Billy Graham said recently in Boston, "We don't try to prove God." Neither do we "prove" the Bible. We testify to its validity because of what it has meant to us and those who have gone before us. This doesn't make it any less true. It can make the Bible more meaningful. We use it as our norm for belief and behaviour because it has stood the test of time. No other book or philosophy can make this claim.

If we would know God and His will for us, we must turn to this Bible and let it speak to us. Perhaps not every time we turn to it will we hear the voice of God, but as we continue our study over the years we will hear again and again the voice of God speaking His Word about our problems, giving us guidance in daily living, leading us out into service for Him.

Church Offices

Lesson for October 18, 1964

Ambition is no sin. Provided—! Provided the ambitious man is not just scheming for himself. Provided the man has the qualifications and does not fool himself into believing he amounts to more than he does. Provided also that he can serve God better if his ambition is fulfilled.

Now the position of an overseer in any line of work is a highly responsible one. The title makes no great difference: it may be foreman, manager, supervisor, colonel, bishop. The top man in the outfit, that's what we mean—the man who not only has his own work to do but has to supervise and direct the work of others also. In the church such a man is called a Bishop. He may be given different names, such as Executive Secretary, or Moderator, of just Overseer; churches that don't like to use the Bible word Bishop have leaders all the same. And we have it from Saint Paul himself that it is no sin to be ambitious to be a Bishop.

No Lover of Money

By the time the letters to Timothy and Titus were written, years had gone by since Pentecost. It looked as if Christ were not coming back right away, and the church might have to last for a long, long time. It was time to get organized. This called for leadership. The old apostles were dead or dying off, and the church had grown so that they could not have handled it alone even if they had all come back to life. Officers were needed more and more. Paul lays down the qualifications for church offices in the "pastoral" epistles. When the first officers of the church were chosen soon after the first Pentecost the leading qualification mentioned was being filled with the Spirit. Why is this? One reasonably good guess is that the church had found that not all spiritual men or women make good leaders.

Sensible and Dignified

Almost every quality Paul mentions is an every day commonsense one. He is planning for a church that will live and grow in a highly practical world, a church with its feet on the ground. Such a church does not need a poor innocent lamb for a leader. It does not need an egghead nor a lazy dreamer. How solid (hardly inspiring!) the phrases are — above reproach, temperate, sensible, dignified. . . Most of us know people who are bright enough, but they never seem to hold jobs very long nor to make many friends, just because for all their brilliance they don't make sense. A bishop who is long on prayer and short on sense does not make a good bishop. (the same goes for any church officer.) A bishop must be dignified. Trivial? Not at all. Some things that are no sin when other people do them, are sins for a bishop. It was not a sin for a small boy to shinny up the pillars in front of a church; but if the preacher or the bishop did that, what would we all think?

Gifted Man Wanted

When Paul wrote to the Corinthians he spoke about spiritual gifts, and some of these we call miraculous; but in this letter there is not a line about miracles. What must a bishop be able to do? Not turn stones into bread nor water into wine. Very simple things: for example to teach, and to manage those whom he loves. To teach and to manage: it would sound more romantic to say "to speak in tongues and to cast out demons." But good teachers and good managers are the kind that make good bishops. For after all, an overseer or supervisor of men must know men; he must know how to teach men, he must love them and at the same time know how to manage them.
